

The diagram consists of a central horizontal line. Above this line, there are two long horizontal segments: one on the left and one on the right. Below the line, there are several short horizontal segments of varying lengths. Some of these segments are aligned with the vertical tick marks on the line, while others are not. The segments are distributed across the length of the line, with some appearing in pairs or groups.